

The regulations that used to be in place to restrict ownership and to maintain a somewhat level playing field among corporate owners and small time broadcasters should not have been relaxed or abandoned.

It's clear to many of us (powerless) listeners that monolithic ownership of public airwaves by large corporate entities only serves the corporate interests... government in this age must be interested in protecting the peoples' interests, the corporations are more than capable of finding ways to skin us one way or another.

We need government regulations to protect public interests; not to expedite corporate agendas.
